

GDD 27 Stand Up

From bystander to upstander, safely

The safe-upstander game for ages 12-15. A decide-and-act game where teens face real harassment, the bus, the corridor, the chat, and learn five safe moves to help without becoming a second victim. Built on one principle: your safety comes first. Rights-framed, India-grounded, with the helplines that turn good intentions into real help. Seven mechanics, 33 choice-and-voice moments, zero "tap the right card". Scorecard: passed.

From bystander to upstander, safely.

Where Speak Up (g19) taught younger students to interrupt unkindness and exclusion, Stand Up takes on the harder, teen-real version: gender-based violence and harassment, the street "eve-teasing", the groping on a crowded bus, the cornering in a corridor, the unwanted sexual messages online. Its first principle, the one that makes it safe to teach, is that your own safety comes first: you help without becoming a second victim. It arms teens with five safe moves (the five Ds), a rights frame (everyone has the right to be safe), and the India helplines that turn good intentions into real help. New v2 build, the gender thread's call to action.

Safety comes first, always. The principle that makes this game teachable: you help without putting yourself at risk. For a dangerous harasser the move is never to confront, it's to Distract or Delegate, get others, call for help. Direct confrontation is only for when it's clearly safe. Every serious case routes to a trusted adult, Women Helpline 181, the ERSS emergency number 112, or Childline 1098.

The harassment they witness.

From the Chapter 4 personas. By their teens, most have seen or felt harassment, on the street, the bus, in the corridor, online, and frozen, unsure what to do or whether it was "their place". This game gives them safe moves and the words.

PERSONA	WHAT THEY NEED HERE	THE MECHANIC THAT SERVES IT
Riya, 15	To know she can act, and be supported, when harassed or witnessing it.	branch + role-play : a safe move + the words.
Veer, 14	To be an ally, not a perpetrator; to drop "it's just a joke".	strike-rewrite + branch : refuse to join; step in.
The Counsellor	To route a harassment case to real, named help.	role-play + match : support & the helplines.
Every teen	To go from frozen bystander to safe upstander.	branch + reflect : pick a safe move.

Why this works (the evidence). Gender-based violence and harassment, from stares and "eve-teasing" to groping and online abuse, is a violation of the right to be safe, and never the target's fault. Safe bystander action follows the five Ds (Distract, Delegate, Document, Delay, Direct) with safety first: assess whether you can help safely, favour distraction and getting others over direct confrontation, and support the person afterwards. In India, help is one call away: Women Helpline 181, the ERSS emergency number 112, and Childline 1098 for under-18s (all integrated).

Seven moves, led by the intervention.

It's a decide-and-act game, so branch leads (you face a real harassment scene and choose a safe move, then see it play out), with role-play giving you the actual words and spot training your eye to read a scene. Mechanics rotate; the same one never runs twice in a row.

MECHANIC	THE TEEN DOES	EMBODIES	N
branch (intervene) signature	Faces a harassment scene and picks a safe move, then sees the outcome.	Judgement under safety.	22
reflect	Considers their own role, courage, and the power of one upstander.	Self-application.	14
strike-rewrite	Flips a GBV myth ("it's a compliment"; "they invited it").	Conceptual change.	12
role-play (voice)	Says the distracting line, the calm "that's not okay", the after-support.	Voice; allyship.	11
sort	Sorts harassment vs normal; safe vs risky; a real D vs not.	Spot the line.	10
spot	Reads a scene to spot the harassment, or the safest move.	Read the room.	10
match	Pairs a D to what it does; a need to its helpline.	Connections.	5

33 of 84 moments are branch or role-play. Binary "tap the right answer": 0%.

The two-test, passed.

Is it fun?

Stand Up plays like a tense, satisfying decision game: a scene unfolds, the bus, the corridor, the chat, and you have seconds to read it and pick a move, then watch it land. Getting a person safely out of a bad moment with a clever Distract ("there you are, come sit with me, I've been looking for you!") feels genuinely good, like defusing something. The five Ds give a toolkit that makes the player feel capable instead of helpless, and the "I actually know what to do now" feeling is the hook.

Is it teaching?

Yes: that harassment is a rights violation and never the target's fault; that you can always help safely; the five concrete moves and when each fits; how to support someone afterwards without blame; and exactly who to call (181 / 112 / 1098). It also turns boys from potential bystanders or perpetrators into allies.

The belief it moves. From "eve-teasing is harmless; they invited it; it's not my problem; helping means fighting the harasser" → "harassment is a rights violation that's never the target's fault; everyone's safety is everyone's business; and the bravest move is the safe one."

Built, not bolted on.

Safety first	11	branch, sort, reflect	Assess before acting; never confront danger; small safe acts count.

An intervention branch + the "compliment" flip, verbatim.

branch: "You see harassment, but the harasser looks aggressive and you're alone."
best -> "Don't confront directly; distract or get help" (you help without risking yourself) flip: "Eve-teasing is just harmless fun or a compliment."

UN -> "Street 'eve-teasing' is harmless fun or a compliment."
RE -> "It's harassment, it makes people feel unsafe and it's a rights violation."

What this game flips.

MYTH (UN ERASES)	TRUTH (RE WRITES)	BASIS
Eye-teasing is just harmless fun or a compliment.	It's harassment, it makes people feel unsafe, and it's a rights violation.	GBV.
People get harassed because of how they dress or act.	Harassment is always the harasser's choice; nothing "invites" it.	No victim-blaming.
Only girls and women get harassed.	Anyone can face harassment; it's wrong whoever the target is.	Inclusive.
Harassment is normal; you just have to tolerate it.	No one has to accept it; everyone has the right to be safe.	Rights.
Boys can't help harassing; it's just nature.	Everyone can control their behaviour; harassment is a choice.	Accountability.
To help, you have to physically confront the harasser.	The safest, most effective help is often distraction or getting others.	Safety-first.
If someone didn't fight back, it wasn't serious.	Freezing is a normal response; it doesn't lessen the harm.	Trauma-informed.
It's not my problem unless it's happening to me.	In a community, everyone's safety is everyone's business.	Allyship.

The micro-loop.

1. Hook. Lensy: "something's not right here, what do you do?".
2. Read. Spot the harassment in the scene (spot), or sort harassment from normal.
3. Decide, safely. Pick a safe move (branch); the game always checks "can you help safely?" first.
4. The five Ds. Distract, Delegate, Document, Delay or Direct, matched to the moment's danger.
5. After & flip. Support the person (role-play), and flip a myth (UN strikes "it's a compliment", RE writes the truth).
6. Sticker. The Upstander badge; GameDone records once.

Signature surface: the intervention scene-card, a real moment, a safe move, an outcome, plus the five-Ds toolkit. The safety-first habit and the helplines carry into the adult safety nodes; the rights frame links back to Consent (Thread B) and forward to GBV in adulthood.

Real, safety-first, India-grounded.

- Register. Ages 12-15, real and matter-of-fact; serious without being frightening.
- Safety first, always. The game never asks a teen to confront danger; for risk, the modelled move is Distract or Delegate, and to call for help.
- Never the target's fault. Every scenario holds the line: harassment is the harasser's choice; the person harmed is never blamed.
- Boys as allies. Veer's arc makes the point that boys have huge power to stop harassment, by refusing to join and by stepping in safely.
- Non-graphic. Harassment is depicted just enough to recognise, never in explicit or distressing detail.
- Route to help. Serious cases route to a trusted adult, Women Helpline 181, ERSS 112 or Childline 1098.
- Access. Audio-first, offline; India-grounded (the bus, the corridor, the helplines); builds on Speak Up (g19).

v2 schema, scorecard-gated.

- gameld. stand-up — node.game === GameDone key === registry id (confirm exact id in engine-host).
- v2 mechanic-embodiment schema. type + typed payload; the branch intervention leads, with role-play for the words and spot for reading the scene.
- Fact-checked content. The five Ds, the safety-first principles and the India helplines (181 / 112 / 1098) verified; flag any helpline or legal edit for re-verification.
- Scorecard-gated. Passed all eight checks (7 mechanics, branch at 26%, 0% binary, 33 autonomy, 12 UN→RE, 4 personas, 100% completeness). Re-run score_gdd.py on any edit.
- Help-resource hook. Harassment routing via the shared "get help" component (trusted adult / 181 / 112 / 1098).
- Tracked. sync_master_tracker.py marks g27 v2 PASS in the Master Node Table.
- Generated path. Label/order/thread changes flow through the xlsx + gen-path, never hand-edited path.ts.

Ethics contracts (never traded for engagement): safety first, always; harassment is never the target's fault; boys as allies; non-graphic; route risk to real help; made-for-India.

Why this works.

- Safety-first is what makes intervention teachable. Because the real danger of "just be brave" messaging is getting a teen hurt, leading with "can I help safely?" and favouring Distract and Delegate over Direct is both safer and more effective, it's the evidence-based standard.
- The five Ds give a concrete, memorable toolkit. Since "do something" is too vague to act on under pressure, five named moves turn a frozen bystander into someone with options, one of which always fits the moment.
- Rights + allyship change the witness. Framing harassment as a rights violation that's everyone's business, and boys as allies rather than bystanders or perpetrators, is what shifts a whole peer group, not just one hero.
