My Body, My Rules

My body is mine · safe, and never my fault

Body safety and consent for 3-6, reworked to the standard: built on the personas, the PANTS backbone, and a researched library of 86 example scenarios. Empowering, never frightening; gender-neutral; and clear that an unsafe touch is never the child's fault.

The safety foundation.

My Body, My Rules teaches the youngest children three things that protect them for life: your body is yours, some touches aren't safe (and the uh-oh feeling tells you), and you can always tell a trusted adult, because it is never your fault. It already exists as a tap/sort body-safety game; this rework lifts it to the persona-and-research standard, carefully, since the topic is the most sensitive in Chapter 1.

FIELD	VALUE
Node / gameld	g02 · my-body-rules (confirm exact id against engine-host; node.game = GameDone key = registry id)
Chapter / ages	Chapter 1 · ages 3-6 · light canvas · parent co-played
Thread / topics	B · Safety, Consent & Boundaries · UNESCO 4.2 (privacy/consent), with A · 6.1 (the body)
Gating	Core
Build status	Built (tap/sort body-safety). This spec deepens content to the 80+ bar and tightens the safeguarding frame.
Toolkit	References the Help-Map tool (trusted adults) via a non-blocking ToolMoment; does not level it.

PANTS

backbone

Especially the child who finds it hard to say no.

From the Chapter 1 personas. Body safety lands differently for different small players, and the parent co-playing is anxious about exactly this topic.

PERSONA	WHAT THEY NEED HERE	WHAT THIS GAME DOES
Aria, 5 (people-pleaser)	Permission to say no, even to family and grown-ups.	Repeated "you can say no to a hug/kiss, even someone you love"; a wave/high-five alternative.
Vihaan, 4 (bold)	A clear, strong way to assert a boundary.	The tactile "Big No" with a firm haptic; "stop means stop".
Kabir, 5 (sensory-sensitive)	Concrete, literal rules; the uh-oh feeling made physical.	The uh-oh feeling as body signals (fast heart, goosebumps); calm, predictable sorting.
Megha (parent co-player)	A safe, non-scary way to have "the talk" she dreads.	Co-play prompts; "safety, not fear" framing she can stand behind, even in a conservative home.
Educators	POCSO-aligned personal-safety content for circle time.	Safe/unsafe sorting, the safety team, Childline 1098.

The mission angle. Body safety here is deliberately gender-neutral (POCSO is gender-neutral; boys are harmed too and are taught to stay silent). The game tells every child, boys included, that these rules and helplines are theirs.

A body-safety toolkit, not a quiz.

One coherent game with six verb-moves, each mapped to a scenario category, the mechanic carrying the lesson. Built around the NSPCC PANTS backbone.

VERB-MOVE	THE CHILD DOES	TEACHES	SCENARIOS
Whose body? (yes-no)	Affirms "my body, my rules"; the boss is me.	Body autonomy.	12 (my-body)
Name it (name-it)	Names body parts with calm, real names.	Correct names; private parts.	10 (real-names)
Safe or not? (safe-sort)	Sorts touches into safe / not-safe / uh-oh.	Safe vs unsafe; the uh-oh feeling.	16 (safe-unsafe)
The Big No (assertion)	Says/taps a Big No, even to family.	Consent; saying no; changing your mind.	14 (consent)
Secret or surprise? (sort)	Sorts into happy surprise vs not-okay secret.	Secrets vs surprises.	8 (secret-surprise)
Tell who? (tell-who)	Builds a safety team; practises telling.	Trusted adults; it's never your fault.	14 (tell) + 12 (PANTS woven)

Moves rotate so the same beat never repeats; the PANTS letters (Privates, Always-mine, No, Talk, Speak up) thread through as a little song.

The two-test, passed.

Is it fun?

Playful and warm, never grim: a sorting game with friendly art, the satisfying tactile Big No, the PANTS song with Lensy, a "build your safety team" moment, and stickers. The seriousness lives in the framing, not the feel; the play stays light so a 3-6 wants to do it (often more than once).

Is it teaching?

Yes, the foundational personal-safety curriculum, the way experts recommend it: body autonomy, correct names (AAP), safe/unsafe and the uh-oh feeling (not the confusing "good/bad touch"), the PANTS rules, consent, secrets vs surprises, and the trusted-adult network, all POCSO-aligned and gender-neutral.

The belief it moves. From "grown-ups decide about my body / private parts are rude to name / unsafe touches are my fault and must be secret" → "my body is mine, I can say no and name it, and I can always tell a trusted adult, because it is never my fault."

No wrapper here.

The anti-wrapper bar met: 86 researched scenarios, each a real, age-appropriate moment, handled non-graphically. Full build-ready library in the companion JSON; breakdown and sample below.

CATEGORY	COUNT	WHAT IT COVERS
My body belongs to me	12	The boss of my body; space; cheek-pinching; older isn't boss.
Real names	10	Calm, correct names (AAP); private parts; not rude; for all kids.
Safe / not-safe / uh-oh	16	Sorting touches; the uh-oh body signals; the doctor/hygiene exception.
PANTS (underwear rule)	12	Privates private; always mine; no means no; talk; speak up.
Consent	14	Say no even to family; ask first; change your mind; respect a no.
Secrets vs surprises	8	Happy surprises vs not-okay secrets; the icky-secret feeling.
Tell a trusted adult	14	Safety team (3-5); keep telling; never your fault; Childline 1098.

SITUATION	MOVE	RELEARN / TRUTH
An auntie pinches your cheeks hard and you don't like it.	Big No	You can say "please stop", even to family.
Private parts are the ones a swimsuit covers; do they have real names?	Name it	Yes, and naming them is never rude (AAP).
A touch gives you a sweaty, fast-heart, icky feeling.	Safe or not?	That uh-oh feeling is your helper; tell someone.
Someone says "this is our special touch, don't tell".	Tell who?	"Don't tell" about touch is a big warning; tell a trusted adult.
A relative insists "just one kiss for me".	Big No	You can say no to kisses, even to family who love you.
A hidden birthday gift you'll give grandma on Sunday.	Secret or surprise?	That's a happy surprise, told soon. Okay.
A doctor needs to check you, explains why, with a parent there.	Safe or not?	Okay with a trusted adult and a reason; you can still ask why.
An unsafe touch happened; you feel it might be your fault.	Tell who?	It is never, ever your fault.
A boy wonders if PANTS and helplines are for him too.	Whose body?	Yes, for every child, boys included (POCSO is gender-neutral).
You told one grown-up but they didn't listen.	Tell who?	Keep telling until someone helps.
You don't know who to call for help in India.	Tell who?	Childline 1098 is a free helpline for children, any time.
You said yes to a tickle but now want it to stop.	Big No	Yes can become no; you can stop anytime.

What this game erases.

MYTH (UN ERASES)	TRUTH (RE WRITES)	BASIS
Grown-ups are the boss of your body.	Your body belongs to you; you can say no.	NSPCC PANTS.
Good kids must hug and kiss when told.	You can choose; a wave or high-five is fine.	PANTS (no means no, even to family).
Private parts are rude to name.	They have real names; naming them is not rude.	AAP (correct names reduce stigma).
If a touch is secret, keep it secret.	Tell a trusted adult; touch is never a secret.	PANTS (talk / speak up).
Only strangers are unsafe.	Unsafe touch can come from anyone; trust the uh-oh feeling.	Body-safety curricula.
An unsafe touch is your fault.	It is never the child's fault.	Safeguarding (it's never your fault).
Body safety is only a girls' thing.	It's for every child, boys included.	POCSO (gender-neutral).

The micro-loop.

1. Hook. Lensy/Sam poses a gentle, real situation ("an auntie wants a big hug...").
2. Play. One verb-move (whose body / name it / safe-or-not / Big No / secret-or-surprise / tell-who), rotated, drawn from the library.
3. UN → RE moment. On a myth, UN erases it and RE writes the truth (e.g., "private parts are rude" → "they have real names").
4. Apply. One quick use: say the Big No, sort the touch, add a grown-up to the safety team.
5. Sticker. The "My Body, My Rules" shield sticker; GameDone records once.

Anchored by the PANTS song, the uh-oh feeling (taught as body signals), and a build-your-safety-team moment that ties to the Help-Map tool. Co-play prompts invite the grown-up in; warmth throughout; no timers, no fail.

Empower, never frighten.

This is the most safeguarding-sensitive game in Chapter 1; the ethics contracts are non-negotiable.

- Empower-not-frighten. Non-graphic, calm, matter-of-fact; focuses on the child's power (say no, tell), not on scary detail.
- It's never your fault. Stated repeatedly and explicitly; safeguarding content is never scored.
- Get Help / Childline 1098. A persistent route to real help on every screen; disclosure-type responses route to a calm support screen, never a "wrong answer".
- Safe / not-safe, not good/bad. Uses the research-backed framing to avoid guilt and confusion.
- Co-play and conservative-home safe. Framed as "safety", defensible to anxious or conservative parents; parent prompts included.
- Audio-first, calm mode, no fail, accessible. Pre-reader narration (speak contract); reduced-motion option; large buttons; offline; colour never the only signal.

Build-ready, contract-safe.

- gameld. my-body-rules — node.game === GameDone key === registry id (confirm the exact existing id in engine-host before renaming anything).
- Content as data. The 86-scenario JSON is the content file; deepening = edit the library, zero blast radius.
- Schema. id · cat · situation · prompt · options · answer · relearn · myth? · persona · mechanic · source (same shape as g01).
- Reuse vs bespoke. Reuses GameShell, GameDone, juice, speak, Sam/Lensy, the UN→RE beat, Get Help. Bespoke: the sort/name/Big-No interactions + the safety-team builder. Not on the shared ModesEngine.
- Toolkit hook. References Help-Map via a non-blocking ToolMoment (self-hides if not unlocked).
- Generated path. Label/order/thread changes flow through the xlsx + gen-path, never hand-edited path.ts.

Ethics contracts (never traded for engagement): no hard fail; never score safeguarding; Get Help everywhere; empower-not-frighten; it's-never-your-fault; UN→RE with restraint; disclosure routes to support, not scoring.

Why this works.

- NSPCC Talk PANTS. The underwear rule for ages 3-11: your body belongs to you; no means no even to family; talk about secrets that upset you; speak up. Taught without scary words.
- Correct anatomical names (AAP). Proper names, said calmly, reduce shame, build body autonomy, and help a child describe anything clearly. (Note: protective effect is expert consensus; formal empirical evidence is limited, so we frame it as good practice, not a guarantee.)
- Safe/unsafe + the uh-oh feeling. "Safe / not-safe" avoids the guilt of "good/bad touch"; the uh-oh feeling is taught as concrete body signals; secrets vs surprises; a trusted-adult network of 3-5.
- POCSO Act 2012 & Childline 1098. India's gender-neutral child-protection law (under-18) and the 24-hour children's helpline; schools deliver age-appropriate personal-safety education.
